A player draws a card and reads the top question to the group. Each player writes a response, usually the first thing that “comes to mind” is best. Remember, you are trying to match as many other players with your response as possible.

What comes to mind?

- A school supply for a first grader
- Dirty _____
- _____ gun
- It comes with straps
- You spread it on a piece of bread
- When you look at the image on the other side of this card

What would your response be to “A school supply for a first grader”?

"Pencil" is a good answer! Now how many others in the group had that as their answer? Two others also wrote down pencil, enter a 2 next to "pencil" on your sheet.

Each of the five questions on the card are read aloud, and your written answers are compared to those in the group. The card is then turned over to reveal a picture.

- A school supply for a first grader
- Dirty _____
- _____ gun
- It comes with straps
- You spread it on a piece of bread
- When you look at the image on the other side of this card

What comes to mind when you see this picture? You can't just name what you see in the picture. What does this make you think of? "Mississippi" or "Mark Twain"? Compare your response to what the other's wrote. This time you get 2 points for each matching answer.

What comes to mind?

After one round, you scored 14 points! A new card is drawn for each of the next two rounds. You respond, compare answers, and record your score.
